

9. Park k. Text book of preventive and social medicine. 22nd ed. India: BanarsidasBhanot publishers; 2013, Chapter10, Preventive medicine in obstetrics, paediatrics and geriatrics; p.492.
10. Parthasarathy S, Rajah C. Feasibility of early breast feeding after caesarean section. srilank 2011;40:11-12.
11. Tarrant RC, younger KM, Sheridan- Pereira M, White MJ, Kearney JM. The prevalence and determinance of breast feeding initiation and duration in a sample of women in Island Public Health Nutr 2011;13(6):760-70.
12. Rajendra K, Ande H, Vishnu K, Colin W. Initiation of breast feeding and factors associated with prelacteal feeds in central Nepal. Journal of human lactation 2014; 30(3):353-7.
13. Sharanya BS, Sudarshan SK. KAP study of factors promoting breast feeding in nursing g mothers and pregnant women. NUJHS 2013;3(3):34-37.
14. Meshram II, Laxmaiah A, Venkaiah K, Brahman GN. Impact of feeding and breast feeding practices on the nutritional status of infants in a district of Andhra Pradesh, India. NATL MED J INDIA 2012;25(4):201-6.
15. Maria S, Koustuv D. influencing factors on time of breast feeding initiation among a national representative sample of women in India. Scientific research 2013;5(12): doi:10.4236/health.2013.512296
16. SemaK ,Hatice Y, Meltem KT, Birsal CD. Breast feeding after a caesarean delivery: Cesarean delivery [monograph online]. Intech Publishers; 2012 [cited 2014 sep 23]. Available from: http://cdn.intechopen.com/pdfs/37218/InTechBreastfeeding\_after\_a\_cesarean\_delivery.pdf.